HALIFAX, N. S., Thursday, May 19.

The Express, with the Canada's news, reached here at 6 o'clock this morning.

The R. M. steamship Canada left Liverpool at noon of Saturday, the 7th inst., and arrived at Halifax at about 10:30 A. M. yesterday.

The steamship City of Baltimore, to sail from Liverpool for this port, would call the following day at Queenstown for dispatches and first cabin passengers, and the other steamers of this line will probably follow the same course.

The very latest news by the Canada, embracing the result of Hungarian and the changes in the French Ministry, were published yesterday, having been received at Cape Race.

THE WAR.

Intelligence of a battle was hourly expected, but no action of importance had yet occurred.

The Austrians had crossed the Po near Cambio, and advanced toward Sale.

They also made an unsuccessful effort to cross the same river near Frassinetto, on the 3d of May. The Sardinian account of the latter effort says the engagement lasted fifteen hours. It recommenced on the afternoon of the 4th, and lasted the remainder of the day. The Piedmontese had but few wounded, while the Austrians suffered severely.

The Austrians on the 3d commenced a cannonade from the direction of Valenza, without much effect.

An official bulletin, issued at Turin on the 4th, says the Austrians have increased their forces at Vercelli, and strengthened defensive works. They have also occupied Trino and Pontestura, having fairly ran-guard at Trino. They withdrew last night from Tricerchi. Yesterday they burnt seven arches of the bridge over the Sesia, at Piscorno. They have also commenced the demolition of the bridge erected upon the Sesia.

A Hamburg telegram says that England has given official notification that she will not be shield neutral commercial vessels in case of war between Germany and France.

The Cologne Gazette correspondent says that Austria has sent a note to Prussia, in which she (Austria) complains of the hostile attitude of Prussia, and that he would not go a step further than he counted her some months back.

The Daily News looks for the first battle at Novi.

A large portion of the French army had been unable to cross the Alps, in consequence of the passes being blocked with snow. Those who had crossed suffered terribly.

It is reported that Prince Napoleon will command a corps of 25,000 men on the shores of the Adriatic.

The Paris correspondent of the Daily News asserts positively that France is about to mobilize between seven and eight hundred thousand men, and that the French army on the Rhine will amount to five hundred thousand, as the Emperor fears that Germany will not remain quiet.

The same correspondent then asserts that on the day the Emperor quits Paris he will address a solemn manifesto to Europe, exposing the cause of the war.

The Moniteur states that Austrian vessels in French ports, or those entering there in ignorance of the war, are to have a delay of six weeks; and, also, that the Emperor has decided that Austrian subjects may continue to reside in France and the French colonies so long as their conduct furnishes no cause for complaint.

Steamers were being chartered at Havre to convey stores and troops from Marseilles to Genoa.

The Austrian Ambassador, before leaving Paris, confided the protection of the Austrian subjects in France to the Dutch Ambassador.

It was reported that the French Government was endeavoring to secure the neutrality of Prussia, and that they had promised, on their side, not to form an army of observation on the Rhine, and that the war shall be circumscribed to Italy.

The tardiness of the Austrians in making the attack created much surprise, and was variously speculated upon. The London Times thinks they have thrown away the opportunity which they at first possessed. The position is probably caused by the artificial inundations made by Sardinia, aided by heavy rains, which obliged the troops, in some places, to recross the Po.

The Duchy of Austria was preparing to take the chief command with Gen. Giulay. The latter, it is reported, disapproved of Gen. Benedek's plan of attack.

A large force of troops were sent off the Austrian frontier, where they were called upon by the Sardinians.

Within a fortnight it was expected that the French army in Sardinia would be 100,000 strong.

The occupation of Austrian land French territory has been allowed only on special authorization.

The London Herald's Paris correspondent says it was whispered that immediately after the Emperor's departure, Paris will be placed under martial law.

The new French loan of five hundred million francs is to be constructed by national subscription. It is to be a three per cent. loan funded at 60f. 50c., or four and a half per cent. issued at 60.

The enrollment of the contingent of 1859 has been completed.

The Vienna Austrian of Vienna has issued a pastoral letter, attributing the crimes of Piedmont and the revolutions of Sicilies, and the critical is expressed that war is not the greatest of evils, but is often a glorious word consecrated in the service of equity.

A counter-revolution by the troops had taken place in Parma in favor of the Ducal Government.

The returning Duchess had reached Parma.

The French cuirassiers in Austria had remained under the protection of the Spanish Minister.

An Austrian corps of observation will be posted near Geneva to watch the Russian corps which are gathering on the Austrian frontier.

The citizens of Milan had been ordered to deliver up all the arms in their possession.

General Giulay has been intrusted with the defence of Milan and the Mincio Quadrilateral, at the request of the Emperor.

There is evidently a mistake here; as Sardinia could hardly intrust herself in the defence of Austrian Territory, nor Austria yield to the Sardinians in Sardinia in that or any other particular. It may be that General Wimpffen, of the French army, is meant and General Wimpffen, of the Austrian; and that the attack upon, not the defense of Trieste and Illyria is referred to.—Ed. Times.)

The Russian Consul, at Venice, has undertaken the protection of Sardinian subjects.

The King of Sardinia had issued a decree giving forced currency to the notes of the National Bank.

The Turin Bank is moreover authorized to issue additional notes to the amount of six million francs, and in return, Baxter engages to lend the Government thirty million francs at two per cent per annum. The rate of discount is not permanent to be advanced without the consent of the Minister of Finance.

Annuities and Rentes in the name of the banking house failed at Vienna.

Money was so scarce at Vienna that discount on first-rate paper had advanced to six and twelve per cent.

THE LATEST.

VIENNA, Friday, May 6.

An official bulletin from General Giulay reports that on Wednesday we made a demonstration near Casale and Frassinetto. Our side had twenty wounded. Near Cornale we have thrown a bridge over the Po, have entrenched it, and fortified the head of the bridge. Yesterday on the railroad near Verona, a train and two troop cars in collision with some ammunition wagons, and some exploded. Twenty-three men were killed and one hundred and twenty-four wounded.

LONDON, Saturday.

The papers this morning contain nothing important from Italy. At the latest dates the Austrians appeared to be retreating, but nothing was known of the object of their movements.

Mr. H. St. John Mildmay is to accompany the headquarters of the Austrian army as British Commissioner, and Colonel Cannon will accompany the Sardinian army in a similar capacity.

ROME, Thursday, May 5.

Rome is most tranquil. The French troops are not to leave. 5,000 Austrians have arrived at Ancona since the 30th, with provisions for six months.

GREAT BRITAIN.

During the election at Limerick rioting became so serious that the military had to fire on the mob, and two persons were killed and four wounded.

The race for the Chester Cup was won by Lessington. Mr. Ten Broeck's Prioress came in fourth. Thirty-three horses ran.

Dr. Lardner is dead.

The Prince of Wales had embarked at Civita Vecchia on board a British man-of-war for Gibraltar.

The Duke of Leiss (not Lewes) is dead. He was married to Miss Caton, of Maryland.

It was said that Count Persigny would certainly be the French Ambassador to London.

It was reported in military circles that the Ministers intend to call out the whole militia, and to add fifty new battalions to the line.

Lord Cowley, the British Ambassador at Paris, reached London on Friday, and had a protracted interview with Lord Malmesbury.

There was considerable animation in the English Naval Department. Additional vessels were being placed in commission, and recruiting was actively going on.

The London Times continues to assert its belief in an alliance between France and Russia, and argues that Russia would not have gone so far as she has without a previous understanding with France.

Some of the verdicts in the Coroner's inquests on the bodies from the wreck of the Pomona complete the navigation which took the ship so much out of her course, and condemn the portion of the crew who deserted the passengers and took possession of a boat, and call for an Admiralty inquiry into the facts of the case.

Sir Moses Montefiore has failed in his mission to the Pope of Rome on behalf of the child Mortara.

On the 4th, says the Daily News' City article, the funds advanced, closing with more firmness than has been shown for some days. The settlement was completed with only one trifling failure. The Stock Exchange may be said to have fairly emerged from the panic. In the discount department of the Bank of England on Friday the business was of an ordinary character, the pressure having subsided. In the open market the demand is very active, and only the best bills, having a month to run, are taken at 4¾ per cent; for two months the terms are 5, and for three months 5¼ per cent. Gold continues to be withdrawn and purchased for the Continent. The fall in the Continental exchanges is checked.

The payment on the India loan was promptly met, notwithstanding the heavy discount quoted for the loan. Out of nearly a million due on Friday, the default was only £34,000.

The Times' City article of last evening says: "The Stock market has been comparatively steady to-day, and, although speculative securities of all kinds remain without recovery, there has been a better tone in every department of business. Investments continue to be made by the public, and at one moment cons was paid for stock. The Money market was without excitement."

There was a tendency to reaction in the Corn market on Friday, and sales of Wheat could not have been pressed except at a decline of 2s. @4s. from Monday's rates.

Lord, Benley & Co., of London, in the Australian trade, have suspended. Their liabilities are £100,000.

The fluctuations on the Paris Bourse had been about 1 per cent., which closed quiet on Friday, at 66f. 90c. for the three per cents.

PRUSSIA.

In the Chamber of Deputies the Foreign Minister has made a statement of political affairs. He said that Prussia was, without deviation, pursuing the object of watching over the safety of Germany, and looking to the security of national interests, and the maintenance of power in Europe, and with these objects in view, the army was ready to march.

The Finance Minister then moved a temporary addition for one year of four million thalers to the income tax, the class tax, and the taxes on meat and corn—the addition to be further increased twenty-five per cent. in case the mobilization of the army becomes necessary.

The Bank of Prussia had raised the rates of discount to 5 per cent.

RUSSIA.

The official journal of St. Petersburg contains the following: "We are authorized to declare, in the most positive manner, that there exists no treaty of alliance offensive and defensive, between Russia and any other Power whatsoever. At a moment when all Europe is making multiplied military arrangements on a large scale, the Emperor was obliged to provide, by the means of political prudence, for any contingencies. His Majesty retains in the present juncture entire liberty of action, and we need hardly add he is animated by the same moderation and the dignity of his crown, and the interests of the country."

TURKEY.

The Times Vienna correspondent says: "We are on the eve of a rising in European Turkey. The political agitation in the southern provinces was exceedingly great. The Porte has about 120,000 men concentrated at Shumla, and Omer Pasha was coming rapidly from Bagdad. The writer thinks the Russo-French plan for the dismemberment of Turkey is a good one, and that in all probability the days of the Mussulmen in Europe are numbered."

INDIA.

The Bombay mail of April 21, reached London on the 7th inst., too late for the American letters to come by the Canada. The news had been anticipated by the telegraph.

SOUTH AMERICA.

Dates from Montevideo to April 2, and Rio Janeiro April 9, had reached England. Freights had slightly declined. Coffee at Rio was quoted 6,500@7,000 rds. for superior; 5,000 for Trade, and 4,000@4,500 for seconds. A sudden demand for hides for the United States had set in, and the market was nearly cleared. Imports were dull.

THE SARDINIAN PLAN AND MEANS OF DEFENCE.

Correspondence of the Tribune, Turin, Tuesday, April 26.

We are anxiously waiting for the Austrians to commence the attack, as you speak of it in England, that the Austrians will get to Turin this time. The three days allowed by the summons will terminate only this morning, and we are in hopes that the French have been making good use of them to bring up their forces. If we were to credit the reports current to-day, some contingents further are already within the Sardinian territory, and within close upon their heels, but we have no positive intelligence on this point, and, if the Government talk, it keeps it to itself as yet. It is not impossible that such reports may be encouraged, in order to keep up the hearts of the population, which seem so high spirited and confident enough. Meanwhile, nothing has been neglected in regards the progress of the enemy, after he shall have crossed the frontier. The country, as I have already told you, has been made water-logged in a considerable district, by means of the irrigation canals. In the Lomellina, the extensive rice-grounds, which it is customary to flood at certain seasons, and for that purpose the land is intersected by many small watercourses. It will be impossible for an army to make its way across the country, and measures have been taken to render the roads at present temporarily impracticable. Cuttings have been made in them, bridges have been broken down, trees have been felled and placed as impediments across the highways. It is hoped that it will take the Austrians a good two days to reach the most advanced line on which the Piedmontese will await them. This line, there seems very little doubt, commences on our left with the River Dora Baltea, along the banks of which fortifications have been thrown up by Colonel (now General) Menabrea. Passing in front of Chivasso, the defensive line continues along the ancient bank resistance to the French in 1799, and following the course of the Po into which the Dora flows at a distance from Chivasso, the Sardinian line of defence joins the Verrua, a strong fortress formerly, and still a very strong position. It is thither that has been sent Garibaldi's legion, which passed close to Turin yesterday evening, but did not enter the town, having been sent round from one station to the other by the connecting rail, much to the disappointment of a crowd of persons who waited a full hour to receive them. From Verrua we come to Casale, between which place and Alessandria there is a defensible line of hills, among which the Austrians will probably not think it desirable to seek a passage. In short, hopes seem to be entertained of delaying the enemy until French reinforcements arrive. The left appears to be the weakest part of the position. The Dora is a small stream, and is not likely to have a great deal of water in it, considering how much is drawn off by the irrigating canals, and how very little rain we have had this year. If, as seems, we were forced there, as it appears likely that it would be, Turin, a city on the left bank of the Po, could not be defended only by a battle in the plain, and would therefore, doubtless, be abandoned. On the other flank, the Austrians, by marching up a strong force from the Duchy of Parma, might pass on the left of Alessandria, but such a movement, if pushed far, would expose them to be cut off by the French coming up from Genoa, while Alessandria would menace their right flank. Without, however, entering into detail as to the probable course of the campaign at its opening, concerning which I could offer but conjectures, I may say that the events of the next ten days must depend in great measure on the rapidity with which the French can reach the scene of action in sufficient strength to prove an important support to their allies. There are, doubtless, plenty of spies both here and in France, and the Austrians may be supposed to be well informed of the positions of the French troops, and of the time they will require to arrive. This is all the question; it is a race between the French and Austrians. If the latter consider that they have time sufficient, and do not find their progress too seriously retarded by the impediments I have mentioned, they are likely enough to make a dash forward, with the view of crushing the Piedmontese before the French can get to their assistance, and perhaps of reaching Turin. Common prudence, however, would seem to forbid their attempting this, unless they saw a clear retreat secured. With the French pouring in, as they soon will be, over the Alps, and by way of Genoa, the operation would be a nice one, and might prove highly critical. Should they not think it to attempt it, they would perhaps retire from the Tresino, on which they have now collected a very large force, in the direction of their fortresses. On the other hand, it has been repeatedly said that the Emperor Francis Joseph never intended to leave no part of his territory open to the invasion of his previous conquest, and it is the belief of many that he has long had an earnest desire to make a point into Piedmont, and give a sharp lesson to his diminutive but plucky neighbor, before the arrival of a large French army should compel him to restrict himself to a more cautious system of warfare. A very few days are likely to clear up so many doubts that I will not trouble you with further speculations.

The Italian Question.

From the New-York L'Eco d'Italia.

ADDRESS OF THE ITALIAN COMMITTEE OF NEW-YORK TO THE ITALIAN RESIDENTS IN AMERICA.

Italy is rising once more to assert her independence. The national cause represented by the State of Sardinia, supported by the sympathy of all civilized people, and aided by France, over the avant guard of European civilization, awakes to new life. In this crisis it is the duty of all Italians to unite in strengthening the valor of the Sardinian army, the hope and support of national independence.

The soldier, called to defend the rights of his country, is often obliged to leave his family without the means of subsistence, which they had received from the labor of his hands; and the image of his aged parents, his wife and children exposed to all the horrors of war, accompanies him to the field of battle, and presents itself, like a spectre, to his imagination, chilling his enthusiasm and restraining his valor.

It is in satisfying the duty of all Italians, who are prevented by circumstances from taking an active part in the war, to aid those poor families, and to assure the soldier that his fellow-citizens will watch with fraternal care over the well-being of his dear ones.

To this end, a Central Committee, under the control of the Sardinian Government, has been organized at Turin, with local Committees in the Provinces, composed of distinguished members of the Parliament, Magistracy and Army, to raise funds for the support of the poor families of the Italian soldiers fighting for the independence of our country.

In connection with the Central Committee of Turin, a committee of Italians has been organized in this City to raise funds for the same object. The contributions will be received by the treasurer of the committee, Ottavio Fabbricotti, Esq., No. 34 Beaver-street, who will give a receipt to each contributor. The name (unless anonymous) and the amount of each contribution will be published in the Eco D'Italia, of New-York, and in the principal papers of Turin.

The funds will be forwarded to the Treasurer of the Central Committee of Turin, and his receipt, authenticated by the Sardinian authorities, will be published in the principal papers of New-York City.

Italians in America! The Committee of New-York, in saying before you the object of their organization, feel confident of your cordial co-operation in the political and philanthropic duty of aiding the poor soldier in the care of his destitute family, while he goes to fight and to die, not only for you and for yours, but also for the great cause of human liberty.

They call upon all true sons of Italy to lay aside the distinctions of party and to unite, with their brothers at home, in the work of expelling once more from our beloved country her hereditary enemy, give according to your means, and the offering, be it ever so small, will be consecrated by the holy sentiment that prompts it.

Promote the subscription among your friends and the friends of Italy. Tell them how she, the ancient mother of civilization, implores their aid. Tell the people of America that, as they once struggled for her political existence, your country now struggles for hers. None will refuse the tribute of his sympathy for our cause.

F. FABBRICOTTI, Treasurer.

NEW-YORK, May 16.

What is Wanted of Italians in America.

The Eco d'Italia publishes the following letter from Count Cavour to its editor, Mr. Brofferio:

TURIN, Feb. 14, 1859.

MY DEAR SIR: I have received the letter addressed to me from New-York, the 20th of January last, and I hasten to express my appreciation of the sentiments therein expressed, so honorable to yourself and our countrymen resident in the United States.

Certainly the offer made by the Italian emigrants there, to enter the ranks of the Sardinian army in case of war between France and Austria, proves a generous disinterestedness, and cannot but be gratifying to the Government, to which such a noble offer is made. But it is well that you should know, and inform the Italians in America, even in case of such eventualities as above alluded to, the Government is not in need of the elements whence to form good soldiers and officers for the ranks of the Sardinian army. These elements are already superabundant in Piedmont. What is really needed is not so much military assistance as money. While grateful, therefore, for this offer, and fully appreciating the sentiments that inspired it, the Sardinian Government does not consider it expedient that it should be accepted, there being, as above stated, already here a superabundance of military element.

I believe that the greatest part of our countrymen only in America can so efficiently serve the Italian cause by remaining in the United States, and using their influence in favor of our efforts, as by returning to Italy.

Receive, then, the assurances of my high consideration.

C. CAVOUR.

NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

FROM WASHINGTON.

Travel—The President Going to North Carolina—Purchase of Clippers in Baltimore for the French Government—Miscellaneous.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, May 19.

The United States frigate St. Lawrence, Captain Hull, arrived at Philadelphia yesterday. Her officers and men will be paid off immediately, and the crew will go into ordinary.

It seems that the Times misunderstood the intention of President Buchanan to be present at the Commencement of Chapel Hill College. His formal acceptance of the invitation is published this afternoon. He will be accompanied by a portion of the Cabinet.

The following is the President's letter:

WASHINGTON CITY, May 12, 1859.

GENTLEMEN: I have been honored by your very kind invitation on the part of the Trustees of the University of North Carolina, to visit Chapel Hill at the annual Commencement in June next. It affords me pleasure to say that I cordially and gratefully accept this invitation. I have long desired to visit "the old North State," and become better acquainted with a people for whom I have ever entertained the highest respect and esteem. The occasion being literary, and not political, is just such as one as I should myself have selected.

Yours, very respectfully,

JAMES BUCHANAN.

Viscount de Tredaine, French Chargé d'Affaires, ad interim, is absent in Baltimore, making a contract, I understand, for the purchase of several clipper-ships of large class, for his Government.

W. D. Phillips, a lawyer from Iowa, and late a Clerk in the General Land-office, is now in jail here to answer an indictment for forgery. He admits that he used Senator Douglas' frank without his knowledge or consent.

The Knights Templars, from Boston, will return to this City to-morrow, en route for home. They will stop at Mount Vernon on the trip up the Potomac.

Mr. Wheelwright and others, who sold steamers to the Government, are now crowding the office of the Secretary of the Navy, who makes it convenient to be absent as much as possible.

Mr. Appleton has no idea of resigning.

Q.

FROM THE REPORTER FOR THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, May 19.

The first installment, $100,000, of the debt, as ascertained and adjusted in the Treaty recently concluded by Minister Rand with the Chinese Government, and due by it to certain American citizens, has already been received.

The Administration has recently received such evidences of the good faith of Great Britain as to satisfy it in the belief that she is sincerely disposed to fulfill all her engagements with this country in regard to Central American questions.

Just previous to Count Sartorris leaving Washington recently, he openly said in a conversation with two well-known gentlemen of the State of New-York, that if there should be an European war, he believed it would not be without embarrassment to our commercial relations, for the right of search would be asserted and enforced. This remark was made with emphasis. The respectability of the party from whom this information was derived leaves no doubt of its truth.

Lieutenant Barnes has been ordered to the sloop-of-war John Adams in place of Vanderburg, resigned.

The President has formally accepted an invitation of the Trustees of the University in North Carolina to visit Chapel Hill at the annual commencement in June. It is expected that the Secretary of the Interior and other friends will accompany him.

FROM THE WEST INDIES.

Interesting From Barbados.

Serious and Alarming Panic Throughout the Island—Fears of a Negro Insurrection—Military Preparations—General News.

From Our Own Correspondent.

BARBADOES, Barbados, Thursday, April 28, 1859.

The most intense excitement, amounting to a panic, has prevailed in this island during the past week. It originated in a report that a conspiracy existed among the black population to rise in rebellion and massacre the white inhabitants. The day appointed for the outbreak was Easter Sunday, the 24th inst., the day upon which, just forty-three years ago, the slaves of Barbados rose in rebellion and committed most dreadful havoc.

I have been unable to discover who started this report. That it was false from beginning to end I am fully convinced; but it is difficult to divine a motive for the circulation of so malicious and dangerous a story. In the first place the Barbadian negroes have nothing to fight for; in the next, they know perfectly well that they have not the faintest chance of getting by force what they cannot obtain by fair, legitimate means. It is true that, compared with the white population, they number twelve to one; but there are five hundred white troops in garrison, two companies of artillery, half a dozen ships-of-war within hail, two thousand white inhabitants capable of bearing arms, and a large force of seamen, which, in the event of any such calamity as the one hinted at, could be taken from the ships in the bay. When I further state that every white man in the island possesses a fire-arm of some kind or another, and that among the 130,000 blacks and mulattoes half-a-dozen muskets, of most antiquated fashion, might possibly be scraped together, I need give no other illustration of the absurdity of this rumor. If anything like an insurrection was attempted here, it would end, not in a massacre of whites, but of blacks, and that they know full well.

But a panic is a singular thing, and accident seems to have lent the one in question every possible aid. There is a Black or Zouave corps stationed here—the Third West India Regiment. Originally composed of Africans from the Cape, it has been extensively recruited in the West Indies, and the Barbadians who joined it have latterly evinced a mutinous spirit. How far the mutiny has extended I cannot say, for the military authorities keep very quiet on the subject. Last Monday week the report was circulated that the whole regiment was on the eve of deserting with their arms. I believe twelve men actually did so. Two were discovered drilling a body of peasants near Inkbrook. This was more than enough. Our fate was inevitably sealed, and the scenes of India were about to be repeated in Barbados.

There are quite as many fools in this island as there are anywhere else. During the whole of last week bullets were being manufactured by the thousands; old swords were sharpened; revolvers were purchased at $50; rifles and muskets were brought out of armories, and all the males of the white population armed themselves with the greatest ostentation. The poor negroes watched these preparations, scarcely understanding what they meant. They merely gaped and displayed their teeth.

On Saturday night, Easter-Eve, the panic was at its height. No one could be seen in the streets of Bridgetown after dark; but, within doors, every man sat in trepidation, with his finger on the trigger of a revolver. About 9 o'clock P. M., a red glare was seen in the north, and a fire reported in that direction. People then might be seen peering cautiously from their windows, and hastily retreating lest they should be potted with a chance shot. I never spent such a delightfully quiet night in my life. The sound of a human voice could not be heard in the length or breadth of Bridgetown.

But the fire had some significance, for it was undoubtedly the act of incendiarism. The manager of the estate was obnoxious to some of his tenantry, and—a very frequent crime in these islands—they took their revenge by burning down twenty-five acres of cane—a loss to the proprietor, who is absent, of some three or four thousand dollars. Another incendiary fire occurred on the following night, in a different direction. I took the trouble to go out to the country, and learn for myself whether there was any excitement among the people; but I found them as quiet as any black sheep could be. The two incendiary fires, occurring at the time they did, may be thought a curious coincidence; but the crimes were committed through motives of private vengeance. There is not an idea among the people of a general insurrection.

Public opinion, or I should say public alarm, compelled the authorities to adopt measures of precaution. The police were on the alert. The regiment at the garrison was divided into detachments, each being ready to march to a given point in the event of a given signal. Cannon were brought out, and would have been used unsparingly if occasion had required. But we slept securely in our beds, free from all attacks except those of bugs and musquitoes. The negroes are beginning to talk about the panic now that it is over; and, seeing how scared the white population were at an imaginary insurrection, they may one of these days be prevailed upon by designing men to commence a real one. They have their damagogues—chiefly mulattoes—whose hostility to the white race cannot be concealed. This hostility seems to me to increase with the spread of general intelligence, but it is only after he has been educated, and has grown rich and independent, that the half-caste of Barbados feels, in its full force, the impassable gulf, deep as that of Slavery itself, which lies between himself and the dominant race. Not among the F. F. V.'s of the most aristocratic State in the Union is the line of demarcation more rigidly drawn than it is here. Though a man be rich, intellectual, polished, refined—though he possess the Anglo Saxon form and features in their highest perfection, yet the taint of African blood, be it ever so imperceptible to the uninitiated, will be detected by Barbadians, and will be sufficient to exclude some unfortunate creature from white society. The large number of half-castes in this island, the production of the illicit intercourse of the two races—are an intelligent, active and energetic portion of the population—nourishing political aspirations which will never be gratified, and yearning after a social status which will never be allowed. This class may one day give trouble in Barbados. They may make the residence of white people in the island extremely uncomfortable. They might possibly have sufficient influence over the fickleness, thoughtless unreasoning blacks to rouse their passions and prejudices, and force them into some overt act of rebellion. But I think they have too much common sense and common prudence to attempt a crime which would be as certainly followed by instant and terrible punishment as that the sun shines at noon-day.

Of the blacks themselves, I can only say that I never saw a happier or more contented population. We need go no further than the neighboring islands of Grenada and St. Vincent to find their peaceable character fully demonstrated. In none of the territories belonging to those islands is there a military soldier. The white population is exceedingly small and totally unable to protect itself; and yet there is not a single instance on record since the day of Emancipation of anything like a concerted attempt. In Barbados, where caste distinctions carried rigidly into effect, and where the antipathy between the white and the aboriginal races, settled exclusively by English, Barbados is to this day most violently English, and, being in an isolated position, she has accomplished within her little self more [illegible] than I ever found within an equal superficial area. It is only within the last few years that she passed two hundred years ago [illegible] from the Barbadian statute-book, prohibiting "the importing of Irish persons" on this sacred coast.

I do not wonder, therefore, at the [illegible] which, though I have made light of it, [illegible] and alarming—[illegible] sale of powder and fire arms, [illegible] trust, and causing, perhaps, [illegible] fear of which I have spoken. But I [illegible] vised unanimously if the panic had [illegible] tation than in the importation of [illegible] The only people who, perhaps, have any [illegible] the American newspapers, [illegible] certain most ridiculous prejudices. I regret to say that these prejudices are encouraged by persons who know better than to believe themselves what they state to be true.

I have dates from Demerara to the 12th inst. No news. Of a ship-load of Coolies recently arrived there, twenty per cent. had died off during the passage; a circumstance commentary on Mr. Buchanan in his next Parliamentary speech upon the Coolie immigration system.

The health of this island is extremely good. Weather, one mass heavenly. Shipped to date, 16,000 hogsheads of this year's crop.

POSTSCRIPT.

By the way, why are your proof-readers so fond of the letter s? They cross it into Barbados whenever they can. I must appeal to you to have the word spelt right. The "Bims," as they style themselves, or the "Bloody Bims," as they are constantly spoken of by the envious inhabitants of other islands, call their home Barbados; the newspapers spell it Barbados, and the Right Rev. the Lord Bishop signs himself Tom Barbados. Don't let the word have your proof-correspondent also in the face of public opinion, the Press and the Church. The word, in fact, comes from the Portuguese Los Barbados, (the Beards,) allusion to the streamers, resembling beards that hang from the trees found upon the island by its discoverers.

MURDER AND SUICIDE.

A Man Shoots his Wife, and then Kills Himself.

A horrible murder was perpetrated at about yesterday in the tenant house, No. 232 William-street, adjoining Louis Gaus' lager-bier saloon. A Prussian, named Germanus, shot his wife, and then followed up the murder by committing suicide.

The history of the case is as follows: About four years since Germanus came to this country, leaving a wife and two children behind him, and bringing with him the woman whom he has killed. He settled upon a small plantation near New-Orleans, where he remained until last November. During this time he had two children, both of whom are now dead. The first wife, ascertaining where Germanus was, followed him, bringing both children with her. That meeting resulted to the woman, now deceased, the fact that the man with whom she had been living as husband was previously married. Germanus persuaded her to remain with him, and calling his property came to New-York with her. On arriving in this City he set up a grocery store in the upper part of the City. Quarrels were continually arising between them, and it is said that Germanus frequently threatened to kill her. In March she left him and went to live with her father and mother at the house where the murder was perpetrated. Germanus has constantly been in the habit of threatening that she should again live with him. During these interviews his conduct was often exceedingly violent. Meantime, his business became neglected, and he was obliged to sell out his grocery. About noon the woman left her room, which was on the third floor of the building, to get a pitcher of beer. While she was absent he came in armed with a six-barreled revolver, and a horse-pistol concealed on his person. Meeting her in the entry, he ordered her to accompany him to the front of the house, and while talking, drew one of his pistols and shot her through the heart. He then shot himself in the pit of the stomach with the other pistol, falling across the body of the woman. The inmates of the house, alarmed by the noise, rushed to the spot, and found both man and woman dead. The body of the latter was immediately carried to her parents' room. The male corpse lay for half an hour at the foot of the stairs. Finally, it was deposited in the upper entry of the second landing, the sister of the murdered woman protesting violently that it should not be laid before her sister. Germanus was under indictment for slandering about the City, a few weeks ago, some libelous verses reflecting upon the character of his father-in-law, and other members of the family.

At 2½ P. M. Coroner Somerset held an inquest upon the two bodies. The evidence of only two witnesses was taken, besides the medical testimony. No one witnessed the shooting, but the fact of murder and suicide was too plain to admit of doubt. The following is the testimony and the verdict:

Wm. Ecelberg, sworn—I keep a tailor shop in the lower floor of No. 232 William-street; about a quarter after twelve o'clock to-day, I heard the report of a pistol, and soon after a second report; rushing into the hall to see what was the cause of the shooting, I saw Ostenberg falling over his wife, near the bottom of the flight of stairs; as he fell his head fell upon his wife, and his feet upon the second stair, with the bottom; she was lying on her back, with her clothes on; I ran down to the assistance of my wife, and had hardly done so, when my father and sister hurried past me towards the street; they were alarmed calling for assistance; a horse pistol was lying on the right side of Ostenberg; I recognize the horse pistol produced as the one I saw.

Maria Wannerracher sworn—I am a sister of the deceased woman; I was taking dinner, when I heard the report of a pistol, followed by a second report almost immediately afterwards; I ran out of the room with my father, and saw my sister lying at the bottom of the stairs, and her husband lying across her; her clothes were burning; a crowd of people came rushing in the hall to see what had occurred; my sister was found to be dead, as also was her husband; Ostenberg passed once or twice after I entered;

MASONIC ORDER.

Visit of the Boston and Providence Knights Templars to Richmond, Va.—Celebration and Address.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

RICHMOND, VA., Tuesday, May 17, 1859.

"This world is full of change"—the times, the seasons and the opinions of men are alike changeable. It is but a few years since the supposed abduction of MORGAN was the signal for a wide-spread and systematic attack upon the Masonic Order and fraternity. A powerful political party was arrayed against them, zealously and entirely obliterating the old party landmarks, which, for the time, were entirely forgotten in the general struggle to wipe from the face of society the then odious secret order of free and accepted Masons. The mutilated remains of a man thrown upon the beach of one of our inland seas, thirteen the intensity of the battle, and rendered the conquest more easy.

The Press directed its batteries against the Order, and most every weapon was brandished in their presentation. Lodges were dismantled, and the Craft, generally speaking, its best friends, in the act of separating, fled from its high estate, and became not only powerless, but dead.

But the constant friction "will tell upon" Having its ups and downs and opposition, it was mightily shaken, but survived, and, strong enough, and to-day it rears its head higher and more proudly than ever. Its membership have vastly increased—its public processions are frequent, with shouts of approbation, and their national visits from State to State are the prominent features, towns and cities vying with each other to do them honor.

To-day, the citizens of Richmond have devoted to their knightly visitors, notwithstanding the drizzling rain which continued almost of the day. At 10 o'clock, the Templars formed in procession, and were escorted by the Richmond Commandery from the Ballard House to the Mechanics' Institute, where the ceremonies of a formal reception were performed; they then re-formed and marched to Masons' Hall, partook of refreshments, and marched to the First Baptist Church, where the address was delivered by the "Rev. Sir Knight J. Lansing Burrows." After some preliminary remarks upon the kind feeling exhibited in this fraternal union of New-Englanders and Virginians, he proceeded to show what Templar love (Mystery of Templar Knights, which was the special theme of his discourse. He said that—

1. Templar Masonry requires of Knights, fraternal obedience, sympathy and love. Masons are taught to confide in each other, to trust each other implicitly. According to the principles of the Order, a Knight is sure to find a trusty, sympathetic friend in every other Knight, though he may have been a stranger to him personally. A Mason always has a right, a right which is promptly recognized by a true brother, to such fraternal and sympathy and aid, and to fear no betrayal or exposure, to dread no unkind repulse. In all his relations in life, the Mason is taught that on the one hand it is his duty to give, and that on the other hand he has a right to expect countenance and assistance from his brethren. Other things being equal, a Mason has the first claim upon a Mason. Of course there is no right to require a sacrifice of any of the political, social or religious interests and relations of life. There is no right to demand a crime or self-injury, but as I have already said, other things being equal, a Knight is always bound to prefer a Knight.

2. Templar Laws require of Knights submission to rightful authority. It recognizes none of those wild doctrines in abuse of liberty which induces a man to set himself up as his own Lord and lawgiver. It demands, and, so far as its influence extends, cherishes obedience to established laws, a cheerful yielding to authority, a merging of self into the society. Governed by Republican usages, adopted before political republicanism was known, it gives its disciples a voice in the house of their own rulers, yet when chosen, it insists upon submission and docility, prompt and unmurmuring obedience. No man too wise or headstrong to submit cheerfully to the decisions and decrees of constituted authorities, to manifest a tractable spirit, and to render unhesitating obedience to official mandates, within prescribed laws, need seek for Masonic association. He must learn to yield implicitly to the will of the majority in all matters not pertaining to the landmarks, usages and statutes of the order, and even in regard to these, he must submit unmurmuringly to the decision of those who are authorized to decide. The "order that is heaven's first law," finds some of its most beautiful illustrations in the intercourse of Masons.

3. Still, again: Templar laws require of Knights the exercise of a benevolent charity. This is the grand external characteristic of the Order. It is that outward manifestation by which more than by any other it is known to the world. No man can be a worthy or consistent Mason or Templar, without the exercise of practical benevolence. There are certain charitable objects to which he must give when called upon. By the fundamental laws of the Order, each one of us is required "to afford succor to the distressed, to divide our bread with the hungering poor; and to put the benighted traveler into the right way. These are duties of the craft suitable to its dignity and usefulness. And though a Mason is never to shut his ear wilfully against the complaints of any of the human race, yet when a brother is oppressed or suffers, he is in a more peculiar manner called upon to open his soul in whole love and compassion to him, and to relieve without prejudice, according to his capacity." The Mason's benevolence and fraternal compassion are required to have a quick ear and a keen eye to appreciate the cry of the sufferer, though his form may be invisible, or to detect a mute appeal though the native language of the applicant may be unknown. Masonry has a language of benevolence, which is peculiar to its own; methods of revealing and relieving distress with which the stranger intermeddleth not.

4. The fundamental laws of the Temple also require of Knights a firm belief in the existence, overruling and providence of God. A Mason cannot be an atheist. The connection of one with the Masonic fraternity who denies the existence of a Supreme, Overruling God, would be a mockery and an absurdity, equaled only by such an one applying for admission into a Christian Church or a Hebrew Synagogue. The very fact of his union with the fraternity involves, necessarily, the assent of his faith to this as a fundamental principle. If he deny his belief and trust in God, he cannot walk one step in harmony or sympathy with his brethren of the craft. All Masonic rites and duties, as an entire system, and in all their details, involve and demand this belief as fundamental and essential. Without it, Masonry has no meaning, no beauty, no power. It is foundation, cornerstone and key-stone of the edifice.

5. But still further: Templar laws require of Knights an acknowledgment of the divinity and authority of the Holy Scriptures. The Holy Bible lies open in every Masonic Lodge. It is its brightest light. The square and compass are not more necessary to a Mason's work than the Word of God. No man can give Masonically an honest pledge of fidelity, integrity and devotion, without a belief in the Divine authority of the Holy Scriptures. Without this belief there is no binding force in his promises and obligations.

6. Beyond all this, which is common to all degrees of Masonry, the essential principles of the Temple require the belief and confession of the Supreme Divinity and sovereignty of the Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ. The defence of the Christian religion, and of this essential feature of it, is the great object of every Knight's vow. It affirms that the sins of the world were laid upon the head of the Saviour, and that there is no hope of salvation but through His sacrificial atonement and death. The world may see the cross on every banner and pennant that is displayed beyond the encampment, upon the sword hilt of every Knight, and embroidered upon his regalia. The grand old motto, "In hoc signe vinces," in the public proclamation of the faith of the order, to the world. Every true-hearted Christian Templar announces this faith in the divinity and sovereignty of Jesus of Nazareth, in terms as unequivocal and emphatic as did St. Thomas, when cured of his criminal incredulity by the exposure of the wounds of the Lord, his assured faith exclaimed "My Lord and my God."

Can truths so sublime and divine as these be professed and taught without exerting a salutary practical influence upon the lives of men? Can there be any conceivable ground, in immorality or vice in principles and teachings like these? The order of Knights Templar is, in its whole theory and regulations, emphatically a Christian order, clearly tracing its origin to pious enthusiasm of the Crusaders in their somewhat faithful but certainly devout contests to wrest the Sepulchre of the Lord from the possession of infidels.

The services at the Church being over, the Knights again marched to the Mechanics' Institute, which had been tastefully arranged for their reception and accommodation.

The ceremonies of the day were finally concluded by a sumptuous dinner at the Exchange.

Telegraph.

MILWAUKEE, Monday, May 16, 1859.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Your paper of the 13th May published a communication containing the following:

"To the Stockholders of the Lake Shore and Milwaukee Railroad Company:

By telegraph from Racine, Wis., to MORGAN CLEVELAND, at the Astor House, New-York. Received May 13, 1859.

"RYAN, on behalf of the Company and three mortgage bondholders, moved to dissolve your injunction. Argued yesterday, and overruled. All right.

MAT. H. CARPENTER."

I beg to say that I am Mr. CLEVELAND's counsel, not his newspaper champion, and the publication of a hasty dispatch from me was altogether unauthorized and improper. I telegraphed as follows: "RYAN moved to dissolve your injunction. Argued yesterday, and overruled. 'All right.'" This contained one error: the motion was to secure, not dissolve the injunction. This is a technical distinction, not very important in a private communication between a lawyer and his layman client, but sufficient to lead to mistake when published to professional readers. The addition to my dispatch, that Mr. RYAN "on behalf of the Company and three mortgage bondholders," moved to dissolve your injunction, was an error, for which I am not responsible, and which I have taken much care for the Trustees to correct.

Academy of Medicine.

DISCUSSION ON QUARANTINE.—A QUESTION OF BLOOD DYNING.

The Academy of Medicine met on Wednesday, some forty members being present, Dr. [illegible] in the chair. The minutes of the last meeting were read, and the proceedings of the Committee on Publication were read by Dr. McNULTY.

Resolved, That the Committee on Publication be directed to place in the Transactions of the Academy, the Medical Jurisprudence, for which a patent has been applied, shall hereafter be entertained by the Academy."

Dr. McNULTY read from the Code of Ethics of the National Association to show that it was contrary to the spirit of the Code for physicians to obtain patents, and urged that what was fair for physicians was fair for men outside of the profession; consequently that physicians should not act upon other people's patents. He doubted whether it was not competent for the National Association to reject the Academy's decisions, in consideration of the recommendations already given by the Academy to patented articles.

The President spoke, like to have Dr. McNULTY's finger put upon that feature of the code which prohibits their notice of patented articles.

Dr. McNULTY said he could not, of course.

THE PRESIDENT—No, I guess not.

Dr. GAUSSOT said it was right in his opinion to use everything—anything that promised to relieve suffering humanity. It was perfectly proper for the Academy to investigate every semblance that promised well—It was not its function to express an opinion upon it.

Dr. McNULTY—But that's what they are brought to us for, and we generally express an opinion.

Dr. GAUSSOT thought that whatever was likely to alleviate pain it was a physician's duty to find, and advise if he thought best.

Dr. VAN KLEEK agreed with the last speaker.

Dr. JAMES R. WOOD said that all surgeons knew that they could not live up to the spirit of the resolution. When any surgical appliance was presented to him for an opinion he should give an opinion on it. And he thought it the Academy's business to do the same. Surgical appliances should come under a different rule from nostrums. It was impossible for the Surgeon to do without the mechanic, and it was impossible for the mechanic to do without a patent to protect his invention.

The President said the resolution would prevent a copy-righted book from examination.

Dr. McNULTY said there was an average of two or three patented articles sent in here nightly for examination consuming their time. He claimed that far the largest portion of surgical inventions were made by Surgeons.

The vote being taken, the resolution was lost—decidedly. Afterward Dr. RICHARDS moved a reconsideration, and that it be tabled. Carried.

The next topic announced was the "Personal Contagiousness of Yellow fever. Dr. HAMRA, (late Marine Hospital Physician,) read a paper on this topic.

The paper was an elaborate review of the Quarantine policies of different nations, and especially a review of the doctrine of physicians concerning the establishment for the port of New-York. Its doctrine, in conclusion was, that the existing Quarantine system needed overhauling; that much of it was a cheat, a farce, inconsistent, unnecessary and a bore; that proper sanitary regulations, on board ships and in the port, might be made entirely to prevent the spread of small-pox or yellow-fever here, but that until such regulations were established and enforced, Quarantine must be sustained. This coincided with the opinion of the highest authorities in England. The British Quarantine Commissioners had recommended to abolish Quarantine and trust to thorough sanitary precautions. Experience showed the systems which would answer for different maritime cities must materially differ. Where yellow-fever was indigenous, as at New-Orleans, Quarantine did little good. Each State must study the system that is necessary for it. But the question involves national interests and federal rights, and the National Legislature should take it in hand.

Dr. GAUSSOT thought the paper in most part eminently sound. So much of rascality had been mixed up with our Quarantine practice here that the experience gained at our Quarantine station was utterly worthless. The whole matter should be taken out of State control, seeing that from time immemorial our Health Officer has been able and was in the habit of controlling State legislation. Congress should appoint a Commission to look the whole subject up and devise plans upon which the several States should continue, enforce or abandon the existing Quarantines.

Dr. ARNEDOUX was invited as an old New-York physician to give his yellow fever experience. Dr. ARNEDOUX, (with a courage and honesty deserving all praise and occasional imitation,) said no; he had never had but one yellow fever patient, and he died the same night that he saw him.

Dr. SZABATNY (once Marine Physician) thought that a Quarantine might be devised to facilitate rather than hinder commerce, and entirely to ward off yellow fever. In consideration of the commercial nature of the question and the revenue involved in it, he agreed that it ought not to be considered simply a matter of State policy, but a national concern. He outlined the system that he would have,—a lazaretto on Bedloe's Island. Wet docks at some convenient point, as at Liverpool, with warehouses where infected cargoes might be promptly disinfected, and the vessels sent to sea again without coming up to port at all. Since the old style of vessels were going out of date, and light-draft propellers replacing them, it would be easier to obtain a safe anchorage than formerly. He was not prepared to fill up his outline, and modestly admitted that a great many people would deem it absurd when they heard them.

On motion of Dr. SZABATNY, Dr. SZABATNY was invited to embody his views in a paper and present it to the Academy. The subject was then laid over,—Dr. HAMRA having omitted all of his paper that concerned the contagiousness of yellow fever, owing to the absence of Dr. J. M. SMITH, who proposed the topic.

Dr. GAUSSOT, rising to a question of privilege, explained—and the Secretary's journal and the President confirmed his assertion—that he had not, as told by Dr. HAMRA's journal, published his paper on the movements of the chest, without the Academy's authority.

Dr. GARDNER presented specimens of Quaker's castor oil solidified to a jelly, inodorous and inoffensive to the most delicate baby's palate. Referred to the Committee on Materia Medica. At 11 P. M., adjourned.

A Novel Excuse for Reopening the Slave-Trade.

NEW-YORK HOTEL, Monday, May 16, 1859.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In your paper to-day, you make some comments upon the Southern Convention at Vicksburgh, and its breaking of law tendencies, its action being for the most part confined to the reopening of the Slave-Trade question.

Your disgust at this law-breaking, and adhesion to the higher law is quite natural, and I would not dispute its sincerity. So also you must, in all courtesy, admit the sincerity of my disgust at the Personal Liberty laws prevailing in some of your Northern States, and the open resistance in all of those States to the execution of the Fugitive Slave Law.

We admit together that in both cases the Constitution and the laws are aimed to be set at defiance, practically and efficiently. All very bad, and so far equal. But a great inequality otherwise exists. Whilst the North loses nothing by these infractions, the South loses a great deal; in this, that every negro slave stolen therefrom, and detained in the North, involves good solid money, the aggregate of which, from first to last, amounts to a great many millions of hard dollars.

Now, no reasonable man in the South believes that these depredations upon slave property can be remedied under the Constitution or the laws; or in time by the change of Northern men's minds restraining them from such violations. So the South is beginning to look round for a remedy within its own control.

Before I state what that remedy is, permit me to tell you something about "the Great Red River Raft." This raft is composed of drift wood, lying and combined together in every form and position. This raft ascends the river against its strong current, and maintains its character through hundreds of years. Its apparent movement, but real progress up the river, is explained in this way: The decay at its lower end is almost equal to the supply of fresh materials at the upper end.

Now I will tell you, that the South, finding the annual loss of slaves from the States adjoining the Northern States to be so great as to inordinately increase the price of slaves, have determined to supply themselves by fresh material, either under the sanction of Congress, or in open defiance of existing laws. They have not only determined upon this, but they have commenced to import at least ten Africans for every slave run off from the old States. Further than the raising of at the north end of the slave Nag, will the new fresh be produced at the south end. Extreme ills, extreme remedies. Yours respectfully,

A SLAVEHOLDER.

MEDICAL ENTERPRISE AND LIBERALITY.—Among the instances of professional devotion and liberality, for which medical men, with all their faults, are certainly to be credited, the late donation made by Dr. JAMES HASSES, of this City, an alumnus of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, is one of the most noticeable. Dr. HASSES has appropriated the sum of $2,500, in stock of the United States Trust Company, for the purpose of providing an annual prize, to be awarded to the students of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, for the best Report of the Clinical Instruction in the New-York Hospital. The prize will consist, each year, of a gold medal of the value of $50, and in addition of a sum of from $100 to $150 in money, and the competing Reports are to embrace the merits of the Clinical Instruction in the Hospital during any four months in the year. The award is to be made by a committee of five, consisting of the President and Professors of Surgery, and of Theory and Practice of Medicine in the College, on attending Physicians of the Hospital, and the New-York Hospital, to be determined by the Trustees of the College.

The Floral Fete at Palace Garden.

ADDRESS BY THE REV. DR. BELLOWS ON WOMAN.

The Palace Garden, fête in aid of Mrs. PHELPS' project for a horticultural school for girls was largely attended Tuesday evening. The [illegible] much better than on previous occasions, and [illegible] delivered a address entitled "Woman."

The movement, he said, for whose benefit this series of entertainments and addresses was given, was one among many others to which the genius of our Democratic and Christian civilization had given birth for the elevation of woman; and he thought he could not supply the little time allotted to him better than in discussing the fundamental principles that underlie all these undertakings for the benefit of the weaker sex. He proposed to show, that, despite of the elevation of woman as the characteristic work of Christianity and of our own time, the relation of Christianity to the elevation of woman was simply this, that the event which established Christ's authority and sentiment in this world was the event which, in the consequences, emancipated women from the two evils which constituted all her wrongs and debasements in the past time, the evils which had been the affluent sources of her misery and oppression, viz.: First, the rules of brute strength, and second, the rules of the whole intellect. Woman owed her wrongs, the misfortunes and the trials of her past history, to the fact that she was the weaker sex as to respect to physical strength,—and, of course, in the position that accompanies it,—and that she was a less reasoning creature in the same degree, in respect to energy and concentrativeness of sane thinking. In whatever it is that constitutes science, invention, philosophy and art, in whatever administers government and advances civilization, woman followed instead of leading. She was not the pioneer except in what flows from and ministers to the affections. Now, as force, physical and intellectual, was the manifest want of Society, was the only thing by which wild beasts, wild forests, savage tribes, and hostile neighbors, could be met and subdued, the worship of that, of course, was the worship of Society in the earliest ages. This gave man a predominancy, and by this woman was made both a gainer and a sufferer. Christianity recognized this predominancy when it declared that "man is the head of the woman;" not having recognized it, the whole influence and tendency of Christianity was towards restraining and upbraiding masculine predominance. The Gospel was essentially feminine in its spirit; that is, it was imbued with what came from the passive rather than from the active portion of our nature. Christ, himself, was not a philosopher, a sage, a hero, a being endowed with science, invention, and predominating will. His affections, if not feminine, lay in that natural region where the masculine and feminine blend and lose themselves in each other. In relation to the question as to the equality of the sexes, the reverend lecturer said that in speaking of the essential differences between the sexes, it was easy to exaggerate or to lose sight of the reality. That an original difference of mental and moral types exist could be as little doubted as that there was a difference of physical constitution. But we should be reminded that this difference lay in the difference of proportions—that the same powers coexist,—not in the failure of either to share precisely the same faculties, though enjoying them in different degrees. Woman's intellect was as worthy of cultivation, and, when well directed, rewarded cultivation of the highest kind as well as man's. The highest genius, like the highest goodness, was always intelligent to both sexes, and seemed to have the qualities of both combined. The greatest poet was not the most characteristic resonance of the most powerful logician, but he had the purest insight, the sweetest fancy, the brightest imagination. The noblest man has feminine qualities in a masculine measure; the greatest heroine has masculine tendencies in a feminine form. But this destructive likeness does not degenerate into identity. Man does not thereby become a woman, or woman a man. It is a woman with man's force, and a man with woman's force that we admire, not a masculine woman or a womanish man. The difference between the sexes are permanent and constitutional, and take care of themselves. The lecturer proceeded to discuss the right of woman to the exercise of the franchise and such other political privileges as are now practiced wholly by men. If, he said, the recent propositions of certain philanthropists and reformers in England could only be practically brought out, and the vote of a nation be taken, as the census is taken, by going from house to house, who would not acknowledge the reasonableness and desirableness of taking the wishes of women into the election of rulers and the settlement of questions both of war and peace, as well as of man? But, under the present practical embarrassments, it was certainly not a self-recommending proposition. If women claimed full political rights, they should be conceded to them; but these rights should not be conceded to the clamor of a few forward members of the sex whose representative character the rest deny, and he was persuaded that they were not likely to be demanded or asserted by the majority under any circumstances. Were the legislation of this country in regard to women conducted upon principles of strict justice and Christian equity, we would soon hear the last word of their complaints as to the denial of their right to vote. But, while women are subject to unjust legal disabilities, it was certain the more and more they would seek for that political influence which men, not on grounds of propriety or sentiment, but from jealousy, were so unwilling to accord them. Having treated somewhat at length the question as to the legal position, especially as to the matter of property, the Reverend gentleman then proceeded to discuss the subject of marriage. So long, he said, as marriage is the universal state, which it only is in a comparatively early state of society, the subject of the inequality of woman is of little importance, because when the woman's and man's wages go into the same purse to be expended in the support of the family, it matters not that the man is able to earn three times as much as the woman. But marriage is not, cannot, and ought not to be regarded as the universal lot—nay, as anything more than the usual lot of man and woman under a true civilization. Were the laws thoroughly just to woman, marriages as a convenience, or a mere protection or acquiescence, would rapidly diminish. Give woman the means of acquiescence, and she would scorn a marriage of compliance. Christianity certainly gives encouragement and support to celibacy both in the example of its founders and in its precepts, and its steady influence is to establish the dignity of virginity and to diminish the semi-barbarous reproach which rests upon the celibacy of either sex.

The Reverend lecturer went on to express the grounds of his dissatisfaction with the prevailing system of female education, and to advocate a wider and more expansive sphere of female employment. He censured the fashionable devotion to dress, not only because of its extravagance, but because of its tendency to widen the distinction between the wealthy and the poor, and described this love of dress as one of the most formidable barriers to the advancement of women. He dwelt forcibly on the duty of cultivating woman's instinct as man's is, and of teaching her how to discharge all the responsibilities of the household. He enforced the necessity of interesting woman in works of benevolence and sisterly charity. Let us, husbands and fathers, he said, help women to help themselves. Let the money so freely flowing for women's weaknesses and caprices flow with at least as much freedom for the sustenance of her virtues and the encouragement of her efforts at a higher life. What we do to elevate the poor through woman's ministry elevates our wives and daughters in the scale of being, and what thus affects them raises us. Yes, we are all, high and low, rich and poor, men and women, bound in one mass. We give to ourselves when we give to others with a wife's or daughter's hand. May God bless this undertaking for which I plead; the women, whose pious cares are seeking to establish and sustain it, and may God bless you with generous hearts and believing spirits; above all, may He bless woman herself with new measures of Christianity, humility and wisdom, and new measures of human excellence and worth. [Loud applause.]

FUGITIVE SLAVE-CATCHING IN OHIO—A DEPUTY-MARSHAL IN BODILY FEAR.—Mr. E. T. COX, United States Deputy-Marshal in Ohio, writes to the Zanesville Courier, that he is the recipient of a threatening letter, warning him that his life is in danger, because he helped in the arrest of a fugitive slave, named JACKSON, claimed by a Virginian. Mr. COX is alarmed, and begs to state, that he did nothing but his duty as a federal officer. He inquires why the discontented parties, who thirst for his blood, don't "take vengeance on the National Legislature which passed the fugitive law, or on Mr. FILLMORE, who approved it;" not on him, a deputy, who had to do what the law required of him. He inclosure the letter which startled him, and it reads as follows:

MAY 11, 1859.

E. T. COX:

Look out for your life for a band of enraged men have bound themselves by the strongest oath the can be sworn to murder you.

Don't slighten this warning nor think it comes from a friend neither, for I hate and despise you as bad as any of them, and if they would have been content to tar and feather you I would have let you take it and helped to tar, or any thing else but take your life. But mean as you are I don't want you killed. So just take care of yourself or you will get a blue pill or be bled with a big lancet some of these nights that will stop your hunting poor darkys.

So look out and you would better bind it to yourself that you got this letter or they may take some other man on you, and may be find me out to.

Don't keep any horses or cabins shut up in your barn.

Do you understand.

LETTER FROM COMMISSIONER REED.—The following is the letter of the Hon. WM. B. REED, late United States Commissioner to China, in reply to an invitation to a public dinner, tendered by citizens of Philadelphia:

PHILADELPHIA, May 13, 1859.

GENTLEMEN: I thank you for your kind words of welcome. My mission, to which you are pleased to refer, has been successful for the simple reason that I cheerfully executed the instructions which the Government gave me, and the Government in its turn, from first to last, supported me. The wise discretion with which the President clothed me, was exercised under an abiding sense of my obligation to respect the Constitution, and the traditionary policy of our country which forbids us meddling in the wars of other nations. The dignified assertion of our right and our determination—to be neutral and at peace, and I hope, I pray to believe, commanded respect everywhere.

It will give me great pleasure to meet high commissioners that may follow from Washington, at any time or place that may be agreeable.

I am, gentlemen, faithfully yours,

WILLIAM B. REED.

MUNICIPAL.

Board of Aldermen.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON THE CITY INSPECTOR'S OFFICE—ADOPTION OF RESOLUTIONS—ALDERMAN BOOTS ASSAULTED—THE SUPERINTENDENT OF SANITARY INSPECTION DIRECTED TO ASSUME JURISDICTION OF THE CITY INSPECTOR'S DEPARTMENT.

It was evident some time before the Board of Aldermen met last evening that the meeting was to be an unusually interesting one. A very large lobby was in waiting, and as soon as the doors of the Chamber of the Board were thrown open the spectatorial portion of it was thronged with interested spectators.

Immediately after the reading of the minutes, Alderman BOOTS arose, and said the Committee to which the nomination of Dr. FOSTER for City Inspector had been referred was ready to report, and on motion, the rules were suspended and the report was read as follows:

The Select Committee to which was referred the nomination of Dr. S. C. FOSTER for City Inspector, respectfully report:

That the nominee was unknown to every member of the Board except one, and your Committee were entirely unacquainted with his character or fitness for the office.

They first made inquiries of the Mayor as to him, and were informed by the Mayor that he did not himself know Dr. FOSTER; that he had never seen him, and he did not even even to know his first name.

That your Committee on inquiry ascertained that Dr. FOSTER's political associations were adverse to those of a majority of the Board, and though the Mayor had been elected in opposition to the regularly nominated Democratic candidate for the Office, and by a party hostile to a majority of the Board, the Committee did not feel themselves justified in permitting the Mayor to transfer the whole power and patronage of that important department to a party who, however friendly to him, and aiding in his election, were yet hostile to the majority of the Board.

The Committee understood from the Mayor that he had ever been a Democrat, and intended in his office to act in connection with the Democratic Party, and they feared that he had been imposed upon and deceived as to the political associations of his nominee. They were desirous to protect him from the consequences of such impositions, and, therefore, held the matter under advisement until they could be assured that their information as to his nominee was correct, a subject not easily ascertained in regard to an individual so obscure and unknown as Dr. FOSTER was.

Before, however, definite information could be obtained, the Mayor took upon himself, without the consent of the Board, to withdraw the nomination, and without waiting for the action of the Board on the nomination already before them, he has repeatedly nominated other persons to the same office, none of whom have been rejected by the Board.

There has thus sprung up a grave difference of opinion between your Committee and the Mayor as to his power and duty in the matter.

In the first place the Charter says that the City Inspector "shall be appointed by the Mayor, with the advice and consent of the Board of Aldermen." The Mayor insists that the consent only of the Board is necessary. Your Committee insist that the word "advice" in the statute cannot be thus nullified, but has and is to have a meaning and force given to it. And that can be done only by the Board's being advised with as to an appointment as well as being required to consent to it.

The same question has long been pending under the Constitution of the United States, and has never yet, as your Committee believe, been satisfactorily settled.

The President's power as to officers is to "nominate, and, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to appoint"—thus showing the power to originate the name is in the President alone. But it will be observed that such is not the language of the Charter under which the Mayor derives his power.

But it is rather the language which the United States Constitution uses as to making treaties: "He shall have power, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to make treaties."

These two different forms of expression are used in the same section of the Constitution, and it cannot be that this difference is without meaning; and, therefore, the practice of the Government under the Constitution has been different under these different clauses. As to appointments, the President has refused to consult the Senate before making a nomination; but, as to treaties, the practice was adopted, as early as WASHINGTON's Administration, that the Senate might advise before as well as after the formation of a treaty.

The Committee find an account of that in Story's Commentaries on the Constitution, section 1,517, and in the Executive Journal, 11th August, 1790. And they find in this respect able authority, a precedent for the right which they now claim of being advised with beforehand, besides the argument that unless they are, one word in the Charter becomes entirely nugatory, and the marked difference in expression is to be entirely overlooked.

Your Committee have endeavored to carry out these views in entire harmony with the Mayor, and have therefore, had several interviews with him. On some occasions he has suggested to your Committee that the predominant party in the Board should have a cautious and agreeable man what they wanted as to a nominee. They did so, and with entire unanimity agreed upon a person, unexceptionable at least to them and their party in his politics, as well as trustworthy and capable. They communicated this to him, and he paid no attention to their recommendation, but within two hours afterward nominated a favorite of his own, without advising with the Board in regard to it.

Upon this point the Board and the Mayor thus differ in opinion.

But this is not the only difference. He claims that after making a nomination, and thus exhausting his power, he has a right to withdraw his action, and thus prevent any action of the Board on their part. Your Committee, however, insist that he cannot withdraw a name he has once sent in without the consent of the Board. For if he can, then after exercising his duty under the charter, he can prevent the Board exercising theirs. He may as well claim the right to withdraw his veto or his approval of an ordinance after he has communicated it to the Common Council. And if he has this right, then has every officer of the City who has made any communication to the Common Council the right to withdraw it, and amend the action of the Common Council upon it.

It seems to this Committee that this claim of the Mayor is entirely without foundation, and cannot be acquiesced in or submitted to without depriving the Common Council of its just control over its own proceedings.

Therefore, your Committee recommend the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Board of Aldermen do not advise and consent to the appointment of Dr. S. C. FOSTER as City Inspector of the City of New-York.

F. I. A. BOOTS,
MICHAEL TUOMEY,
H. W. GENET.

ALDERMAN ADAMS said the Mayor had told him in the presence of the Chairman of the Committee, that if the Democratic members of the Board would get together and send in a list of names he would consider them. No list of names had been sent in.

Alderman BOOTS said he had told the Mayor that he was not in favor of sending in more than one name at a time, and in caucus he should oppose the sending in more than one name at a time. A caucus had been held and it had been decided to send in one name at a time.

Alderman TUOMEY said that while the Committee was talking with the Mayor, he (the Mayor) had the nomination of his candidate in an envelope ready to be sent into the Board. The Mayor had not put the men he had nominated on the right track; he had not told them to make the nomination of members of the Common Council with a view to securing a confirmation of their nomination. The Common Council would not confirm a man that they knew nothing about. The Mayor at first had said he was for making a physician City Inspector, but since the first nomination he had sent in those who were not doctors.

Alderman ADAMS said the Chairman of the Committee had not in his presence said to the Mayor that he should oppose the sending in of a list of names. The Committee had existed four months—long enough for a man to graduate with a doctor's degree.

Alderman BOOTS denied that he had acquiesced with the Mayor in the proposal to send in a list of names. The Democratic members of the Board had met in caucus and decided to send in to the Mayor one name at a time. Unanimously they had decided to submit the name of Aaron B. Rollins. That name had been submitted, and within a brief period the name of Mr. Dimond had been sent into the Board without consulting with the caucus. It had been said that the Board of Aldermen was past being insulted; he (BOOTS) was, if never before insulted it was in this instance. He should always respect the Chief Magistrate of the City, but he knew his rights and would maintain them.

Alderman TUOMEY supported the statements of Alderman BOOTS. He also was present when a Committee of Democrats presented the name of Dr. Rollins, and the Mayor replied that gentleman and said he would consider his name. At the same time the Mayor had the nomination of Mr. Dimond in an envelope, and sent it into the Board an hour or two after. The public had taken sides with the Mayor, not properly understanding the subject.

Alderman BEARDSLEY thought the politics of the Mayor was enviable, and that he could not have treated the Aldermen more fairly than he had.

Alderman BOOTS and BEARDSLEY made mutual recriminations with regard to the action of each concerning the nomination of Mr. Devlin for Sewer Commissioner, and after some further desultory debate the report was adopted and the resolution adopted.

The President announced the following communication from the Mayor:

MAYOR'S OFFICE, New-York, May 18, 1859.

To the Board of Aldermen: Gentlemen—Since my communication to your Honorable Board on the 16th inst., in relation to City Inspector, a judicial decision has been rendered in the Supreme Court by Justice W. F. Allen, before whom argument was heard on a motion for a peremptory mandamus to compel the Mayor to countersign a warrant for the salary of Mr. Morton, for the months of January and February, 1859, which fully confirms the opinion held by me that the term of Mr. Morton expired on the 31st of December last.

A copy of this decision, made on the 17th inst. is herewith transmitted, and among other things it will be seen that it states that "on his (Morton's) own showing" he has no claim to the office of City Inspector.

The office having thus been judicially declared to be vacant, no contract or appointment of money due or supposed can lawfully be made by the City Inspector's Department, as there is no such officer in existence.

Your Committee have endeavored to carry out these views in entire harmony with the Mayor, and have therefore, had several interviews with him. On some occasions he has suggested to your Committee that the predominant party in the Board should have a cautious and agreeable man what they wanted as to a nominee. WEST ALBANY, N. Y., May 16, 1859.

The following statement shows the receipts of live stock viâ the New-York Central road:

	This week.	Last week.	Total. Since Jan. 1.
Cattle	2,968	2,912	40,607
Sheep	1,218	700	59,142
Hogs	700	983	15,010

	One week last year.	Av. w'kly re'ts for 4 years.	Total to same date last year.	Total to same date this year.
Cattle	2,416	2,336	40,271	40,607
Sheep	1,392	3,127	53,876	59,142
Hogs	5,625	3,747	67,315	15,010

CATTLE—The receipts this week foot up about 200 head more than last; the quality is about the same, and the market firm at a slight advance on the best lots, say ¼c. ⅌ lb., live weight. A great many changed hands, mostly to go to New-York; the Eastern buyers are here, but will take only about 300 head; among them Col. J. May takes 60 for Providence; and for Brighton, Micah White 47, Sinclair & Wales 20, and A. N. Monroe 174. These, with some lots retailed here, will leave about 2,900 for the New-York market.

We quote prices of Cattle:

	This Week.	Last Week.
Extra	6¾@6¾	6¾@6¾
First quality	5¾@6	5½@5¾
Second quality	4¾@5¼	4¾@5
Third quality	4 @4½	4 @4½
Inferior	3¼@3¾	3½@3¾

Freights still rule very low, some cattle coming billed this week at $3 ⅌ head, Chicago to New-York. One pair of superior cattle coming through in a car by themselves at this figure.

SHEEP—The receipts are very light and sales dull, very few changing hands. The quality, if we except one lot, is much below the average. Robert Hunt took 90 head at $3 50 each. Calvin Baker had 150 extra Kentucky, sheared, which would weigh about 120 lbs. each, which he held at $5 ⅌ head.

HOGS—Nearly all the Hogs coming viâ the Central Railroad go direct to New-York or Brighton viâ Schenectady and Troy, which accounts for the falling off in the numbers at this place.

H. J. Groesbeck sold 82 State "Block" Hogs, weighing 129 lbs. each, at 6¾c.

John De Forest sold 265 Illinois "caffle" hogs, a mixed lot, averaging 135 lbs. each, at 6 cents.

PHILADELPHIA, Monday, May 16, 1859.

The upward tendency noted in the market last week still continues, the demand being fair and the supply comparatively light. The receipts, however, are increasing, and as the warm weather approaches it is expected that prices will fall off, as the demand will be limited. The lots of cattle exhibited to-day were from Lancaster and Chester counties, and the quality was rather better than last week. Nearly 100 head were sent to New-York in anticipation of higher prices. This shows that the drovers are firm in their demands, and indifferent about selling unless at full rates. The following was the range of prices to-day:

Choice quality, ⅌ 100 lbs	$10 00@$12 00
Prime quality, ⅌ 100 lbs	9 00@ 9 50
Fair quality, ⅌ 100 lbs	8 50@ 8 75
Ordinary quality, ⅌ 100 lbs	8 00@ 8 50
Common quality, ⅌ 100 lbs	7 12@ 7 25
Inferior quality, ⅌ 100 lbs	7 00@ 7 25

The offerings of sheep amounted to 2,500 head. The sales were effected at from 6c.@6¾c. gross, and 7c.@7¾c. for wooled sheep. Good quality are in active demand.

The Cow market continues dull. The offerings at Wardell's amounted to 250 head, which were sold at the following prices:

First quality milch cows, each	$35@$40
Second quality milch cows, each	30@ 35
Third quality milch cows, each	20@ 0
Ordinary quality milch cows, each	25@ 28
Dry quality milch cows, each	20@ 25

The arrivals of hogs at Phillips' Union Drove Yard amount to 1,500 head, which sold at prices ranging from $7 80@$8 75 ⅌ 100 lbs., net.

NORTHERN TEACHERS AT THE SOUTH.—A letter from Charleston, S. C., addressed to a country paper in Georgia, has the following lament:

"Two teachers from New-York and one from Boston have arrived here, destined to officiate in the Public Schools of this city. I regret much the necessity which compels us to employ those who, if they are not themselves, belong to the class who love us not. We have much available talent in the South, but I fear there's too much pride in the way. I can see no more dreadful ordeal in female teaching for a livelihood, than for her husband to be working for a living. There are, I fear, many young ladies of education who, while they might be contributing to the dignity and independence of the South, by engaging in some occupation where they are needed, though they may feel ever so patriotic, allow us to seek the services of those North of us, whose interest must be more or less antagonistic to our institutions, simply because a false pride will allow them to imagine that dignity and a crust fare preferable to anything assimilating to servitude. This is a great error."

NEWS OF THE DAY.

Additional interesting advices from the Canada at Halifax extend our information of the movements of armies in Italy. The Austrian army had passed the Po at one or two points, and at Frassinetto had had a smart action with the Allies, resulting decisively for the Austrians. The line of the Railroad from Vercelli to the Ticino was in their hands. Vercelli had been occupied and fortified; they had advanced to the banks of the Scrivia, some fifteen miles from Alexandria, and were exhibiting every indication of desiring a combat. A dispatch, however, at the same moment gives a rumor that the whole body were apparently on the target of retreat. From Paris we have intelligence that the Emperor expected to have Paris on the 15th, not, however, intending to be just behind a General Manifesto to the Parisians, setting forth his views of indefeasible nationality. Great preparations were making, it was reported, for the defence of the Rhenish frontier against the possibility of a German intervention, a measure which the Austrians had initiated by throwing a large body of troops upon the frontier of Bohemia, as a precaution against the Russians. The general news is of extraordinary importance, and we publish a scientific notability in a translation by the person of Dr. DIONYSIUS LARDNER.

An accident from Newport, New-Providence, furnishes news to Bay St. The only boat of interest is the report of the wreck of the schooner C. J. Jewett, bound from New-York to Mobile, which foundered May 4, on Russell's Island Reef.

Important dispatches from Washington state that the acting Prussian Chargé, Vicomte DE TRETTLANDT, has left for Baltimore to negotiate a number of steamer ships for the French Government. The first installment of $100,000 on the loan adjusted by Mr. RIEDT with the Chinese Government, on certain American securities, has been received at the Treasury Department.

Commodore SHUBRICK has accepted the invitation of the Trustees of the University of North Carolina to attend the Commencement at Chapel Hill to-day. A portion of the Cabinet will accompany him.

The General Assemblies of the two branches of the Presbyterian Church in the United States commenced their annual sessions yesterday. The old Assembly met at Indianapolis; the opening sermon was delivered by the Rev. Dr. BURR, Moderator of the last Assembly. Three hundred and twenty delegates were present. The Rev. Dr. THOMPSON was elected Moderator for the ensuing meeting, and the Rev. Mr. MANN, of Philadelphia, was chosen as temporary Clerk. The new Assembly met at Wilmington, Del., and chose the Rev. Dr. PATTERSON, of Chicago, as Moderator, and the Revs. CHARLES P. BUSH, of Philadelphia, and H. E. NILES, of New-York, as temporary Clerks. The opening sermon was preached by the Rev. Dr. THOMPSON, of Buffalo, Ex-Moderator.

Governor O'BRIEN arrived at Albany yesterday, from Boston. He was formally welcomed by Attorney-General TREMAINE, and spoke briefly in reply.

The New-York Light Guard passed through Easton, Penn., yesterday, en route to Reading.

Further particulars of the disaster on the New-York Central Railroad have reached us. Upwards of twenty persons, injured at the time of the accident, are receiving medical attentions at the hotels in Syracuse. A complete list of their names is given in our Telegraphic columns.

The New-York Sanitary Association held a public meeting last evening in the Fourteenth-street Medical College. General MANNING presided. An essay on the influence of light on health and the lack of it in producing disease was read by Dr. JOHN H. GRISCOM, and interesting addresses made by the Rev. THEO. L. CUYLER, the Hon. ERASTUS BROOKS, and General PARSONS M. WEYMOUTH. The last-named gentleman read a carefully prepared history of the failure of the Health bill last Winter at Albany, in which the Hon. Mr. SPENCER was flayed, several other gentlemen scored a good deal, and still others handsomely complimented. The meeting adjourned at 11 o'clock, having interested all present to the last.

The Mayor, in reply to a resolution requesting him to convene the Board of Health, sent in a communication to the Board of Councilman last evening, declining to do so, on the ground that there were no matters calling for action at present, which the Commissioners of Health could not take charge of. Councilman OTTERSON offered a resolution directing the Comptroller to draw no warrants on account of work done for the City Inspector's Department or for street cleaning, after the 15th instant, without the direction of the Common Council or of the Board of Health. The resolution was tabled, and on the motion of the same gentleman a committee of three was appointed to devise some satisfactory system of street cleaning. The Mayor sent in a request for authority to have drawings of the Arms of the City made so that they might be sculptured on the columns of the new Exchange in Lyons, France. Senator VARIAN introduced a request to that effect through Concil WHITE, on behalf of the corporation of that city. Fifty dollars are to be appropriated for the purpose.

In the United States Circuit Court yesterday, the case of STRAHAN vs. Mayor was given to the jury in a very clear and humble charge by Judge INGERSOLL. The action, as will be recollected, is instituted against the Corporation in consequence of the firm refusing to pay the value of the [illegible] which they converted to their own use as early as possible.

Unfortunate Manager.

Where are sellers of secrets that are well built in both New York and Brooklyn, of which the [illegible] not well acquainted. This market causes a vast [illegible] Persons, [illegible] which [illegible] a sufficient [illegible] to which nobody is guilty, [illegible] To sell in the middle of the street, where one often finds all the manners, old [illegible] a [illegible] and [illegible] through a West Hill a ship without a chart or a pilot. Seeing how easy it is to remedy all this, there ought to be an immediate check in remedying every house in every street where houses are pretty tidily built in, and even where houses are coarse would be no harm. If every tenth lot were measured, it is strange that mechanics do not see the advantage they have in letting measured houses. One gets the impression that he is going well into the country, and is surprised to hear that they have got out, unknowing in violation of a definite indication in by being between two other streets, on the south side, just beyond a white church, three doors above a corner. When our new Mayor, Jew gent into office, members on the Board will greatly facilitate the labors of the registrars, and without them it will be almost impossible for either party to prevent illegal voting or to fetch in justice those who have falsely sworn in their votes. The Common Council would do well to look to this matter, as trifling in its cost and yet so very promotive of comfort and convenience. If the Common Council neglect, let the residents, or a part of them, on a street, petition to have their street numbered, and by "ever praying," and an occasional punch of their Alderman, they will probably succeed in attaining the end of their prayer.

Naval Intelligence—Arrival of the United States Sloop-of-War Falmouth.

The United States sloop-of-war Falmouth, Commander Isaac Fassnage, arrived at this port last evening from Montevideo, and 33 days from the River La Plata. The Falmouth has been 8 days north of Hatteras, with northeast winds, heavy sea, and thick fog. The United States steamers Memphis, Atlanta, and M. W. Chapin sailed from Montevideo March 25, for New-York, and would stop at Pernambuco and Barbados for coal. She passed them March 27, 200 miles east of the mouth of the river. Left at Montevideo United States steamers Caledonia and Westernport, to sail for New-York as soon as ready, probably in a fortnight. The following is a list of the officers of the Falmouth:

Commander, Isaac Fassnage; Lieutenants, Geo. W. Rodgers, Wm. W. Pollock, Joseph S. Skerrett, Geo. Brown; Surgeon, G. G. Abernethy; Acting Purser, S. R. Franklin; Lieutenant of Marines, Clement D. Notice.
O. J. WOOD & CO.
Have removed from No. 312 to
No. 444 Broadway, New-York.

In consequence of the very large number who prefer to buy Professor Wood's Hair Restorative from the manufactory direct, the proprietors have resolved to make retailing a feature of their business hereafter, and will now be most happy to see all their lady and gentleman patrons, and to give them all the information in their power, at their new store, No. 444 Broadway.
The number of years Professor Wood's Hair Restorative has been before the public, and the manner in which it has sustained its reputation, as shown by the constantly increasing demand for it, renders it unnecessary at this late day to detail its merits. Suffice it to say, it is no idle effort, in imitation of some others, stimulated by its success, but a scientific and well-established preparation for restoring the color and growth of the hair, eradicating dandruff, preventing the hair falling out, and a general restorer of all affections of the hair and scalp.

Dyspepsia.
Dr. W. H. SMITH, Philadelphia, having been repeatedly urged to establish an Agency for the sale of his unrivaled "Dyspepsia Cordial" in this City, has appointed the undersigned his Agent for supplying it to the City trade, and it can be had wholesale and retail at No. 13 John-st., near Broadway, second floor. To those who are suffering from this terrible disease, it is only necessary to say that this has wrought wonderful cures of it, and kindred diseases, as hundreds in this City can testify, and has never yet failed to relieve permanently any disease of the liver or digestive organs, when tried. It is not a purgative, in any sense, and is a most delightful tonic to be taken, its basis being the very best of Monongahela Whiskey. We shall publish, from day to day, certificates from the many on hand, of those who have been entirely cured by it. R. R. KELLOGG.

THE NEW BROADWAY TABERNACLE.—AUCTION SALE OF CHOICE OF PEWS.—The large and splendid church known as the Broadway Tabernacle, (the Rev. Dr. TYLER, pastor,) recently completed on the corner of Broadway and Thirty-fourth-street, was opened Wednesday for the renting of pews and sale of choice seats. The church contains 312 pews, the annual rent of which is assessed at prices varying from $60 to $5—the total amount of assessment, [illegible]. The sale Wednesday was for choice of pews, which entitled the bidder merely to one year's lease of such pew as he might select at the assessed annual rent. Owing probably to the unfavorable weather there was a small attendance at the sale, and the bidding was by no means spirited. The auctioneer, Mr. HAVE, stated the terms to be quarterly, cash payments in advance, the premium to be included in the first quarter. The first choice of pew was then started at $10 and ran up to $50, where it was bid off to S. M. BATES, who selected No. 206, being seven removes from the pulpit in the middle row. S. W. BENEDICT took the second choice at $45. M. O. ROBERTS third choice, at the same price. From this point the premiums ran down to $1. In addition to the persons above-named, the most eligible seats were obtained by Dr. G. P. Townsend, Roe Lockwood, Dr. Ranney, John Gray, Abner Bartlett, Aden Smith, Austin Abbott, C. T. Rodgers, A. B. Millard, M. J. Frisbee, A. A. Fisher, M. Pratt, W. E. Caldwell and others. The number of pews commanding premiums was 70, and the total amount of premiums $750.

THE PRESENTATION TO MR. MORPHY.—The presentation to Mr. MORPHY by the Union Chess Club of a silver wreath of laurel, which was to have taken place last evening, was postponed on account of Mr. M.'s engagements. It is not probable that it will occur until after the presentation of the chess-board and men by the New-York Chess Club. Mr. M. spent the evening at the rooms of the latter Club, in the University, contesting the third game of his match with Mr. PAULSEN, giving him, as before, the odds of a knight. The game, which commenced at eight o'clock, was in progress at midnight, with but little prospect of an immediate termination.

NEW POWERS OF NOTARIES PUBLIC.—The following is the act passed April 15, 1859, impowering Notaries Public to perform the duties now performed by Commissioners of Deeds:

SECTION 1. In addition to their present powers Notaries Public of this State are hereby authorized to administer oaths and affirmations, and to take the proof and acknowledgment of deeds, mortgages and any other papers for use or record in this State, in all cases where the same may now be taken and administered by Commissioners of Deeds, and under the same rules, regulations and requirements prescribed to Commissioners of Deeds; and such Notaries' acts may be performed without official seal.
SEC. 2. This act shall take effect immediately.

ACCESS TO THE RED RIVER COUNTRY.—The Toronto Globe makes the following statement: "As soon as the Northwest Company find the means, they intend to cut a road from Fort William to a point 30 miles off, whence water communication is comparatively easy. When that is accomplished, and boats, carts, and horses provided, the Company will undertake the conveyance, not only of passengers, but of goods, and will find ample employment for all their resources. Should gold in large quantities be discovered on this side the mountains, of the evidence of which we receive fresh evidence every day, there will be a rush of immigrants which will exhaust all the means of conveyance which can be provided. It is not alone gold seekers who will go. It is evident that many will go, and only on their journey, but settle down on the prairies, which will be supplied by the country itself. Time cannot be spent, to say great spend, other

LAW REPORTS.

[illegible] Libel Suit.

[illegible] FOR IN EVIDENCE—LIFE ON A [illegible] STATE FRIGATE, AT A SUMMER WA[illegible] WHERE—BLACK AND AS A FASHIONABLE NEW[illegible]

[illegible] upon a charge of sending a [illegible] against Captain Chauncey, [illegible] Navy, by Mr. Hillsburgh, his Prosecutor, was resumed yesterday, at 2 P. M., before [illegible] Commissioner and subscribing witness. The commissioner and subscribing witness were both present with their counsel, and a large concourse of respective friends and witnesses interested in the matter.

The following letter was put in evidence:

[illegible] Steamer, off Charleston, Sept. 20, 1855.

[illegible] Dear Sir: We arrived at this anchorage [illegible] day, and crossed the usual twenty miles outside, in the open ocean, [illegible] Charleston. We experienced a very [illegible] passage, which was [illegible] those who [illegible] all right. [illegible] had taken good care of him as he is a good fellow. [illegible] I have brought much of you all. If you, my [illegible] Hillsburgh, or my dear boy, Reddy, [illegible] write Cutts.

[illegible] heart of hearts. I feel as if I should have a heavy [illegible] from the moment I left your side, until [illegible] I have you in my arms again. I have you [illegible] letter for Boston on your return to Sharon, [illegible] I shall write to you, and I know that you will write to me. Tell Cutts to be quiet by your kind and [illegible] advice, in all things in [illegible] to her mercy.

[illegible] September 21.—I am off to-day. God bless you.

The cross-examination of Mr. Hillsburgh was resumed as follows:—

On the evening of the ink-stand scene I was sent for by Captain Chauncey to come to his room; I think it was in November, 1852; the first remark the Captain made to me on my entrance in the room was, "I think you told that woman any longer;" he [illegible] the wife and followed up the remark by saying, "She has been out with a lot of strumpets like herself, and is nothing more or less than a G—d d—d b—h;" Mrs. Chauncey got excited and walked towards him, at which I interfered.

Q.—What did you do? A.—I said "Captain, you must not talk so to your wife."

Q.—What response did the Captain make? A.—He seized an ink-stand from a table and hurled it at his wife; the stand hit her, and the ink spilt over her dress and on the door, following the throwing of the ink-stand, the Captain seized a chair and struck his wife; the chair hit her upon the shoulders and back and was broken; I immediately stepped in between them.

Q.—What did the Captain do then? A.—He did not do anything for a minute but talk; he called her a wh—e, a d—d b—h, a rotten b—h, and everything else that was vile; after talking in this strain awhile he rushed up to her and pushed her against the wall.

Q.—What did Mrs. Chauncey do at this treatment? A.—She went in another room and got a pistol; presenting the pistol at the Captain's head, she told "I don't care for you, you old rascal, and will not touch her."

Q.—If he did not touch her, what did he say? A.—He said that she need not be alarmed, as he would not touch a woman.

Q.—What else did Mrs. Chauncey do? A.—She kept the pistol in her hand, the muzzle still pointed at his head; she called him a coward, and said he was a pretty man to talk about defenceless women, as women were the only persons he had ever been known to whip.

Q.—How did the scene wind up? A.—I left the room, and left them to fight it out between themselves.

Q.—Was was with you when you met Mrs. Chauncey at Sharon Springs? A.—Captain was with me, and the Captain's little boy; they stopped at the same hotel with me; the Captain's boy had been previously placed in my charge; I rode in a carriage with Mrs. Chauncey to the hotel; the Captain and his boy rode in a carriage which followed; I used to visit Mrs. Chauncey in her room occasionally, and it was brought about at the instance of Captain Chauncey; one morning I was on the piazza with Mrs. Chauncey and her little daughter Kate, when we heard Captain Chauncey exclaim from his room above, "I wonder where the little b—h has gone! I suppose they have gone into the woods to meet some man;" Mrs. Chauncey immediately went to her room; upon hearing loud talking, followed by the shutting of a window; hearing the same music, I walked up to their room.

Q.—What did you see on entering the room? A.—Captain Chauncey had a stick in his hand, and was beating his wife.

Q.—Did he strike her after you entered? A.—He struck her once; I told the Captain he ought not to treat his wife so, and begged of him, if he had no respect for himself or wife, not to disgrace me; I had been in the habit of going to Sharon Springs in the Summer for several years.

Q.—Was any further violence used by the Captain to his wife? A.—I left the room after begging the Captain to be more discreet in his conduct; a few days afterwards the Captain asked his wife, in my presence, to forgive him for the violence he had shown her; she said she never would forgive him, the disgrace had been so public; the Captain still begged her forgiveness, saying that he did not know what he was doing at the time; she was still firm in refusing to forgive him, alleging that it was not the first time, and that he had treated her in a similar manner frequently before; a day or two after this occurred the Captain asked me to take a walk with him, and he had something private to say to me; I did walk with him, and he importuned me to try and reconcile his wife to him; I promised to see her in regard to the matter, and had an interview in the parlor of the hotel; but I was unable to induce her to forgive the Captain; I told the Captain the result of my interview; he then asked me if I was my father that I had to obey him; I told the Captain he would finally overreach his wife.

Q.—Did Mrs. Chauncey ever forgive his wife? A.—I saw in a letter that Captain Chauncey had been ordered to the Hornet, and was the first to apprise him of the fact; my wife was exceedingly anxious to secure the reconciliation of his wife before leaving Sharon Springs, and I made my utmost to effect such a result, but failed without accomplishing the purpose. Mrs. Chauncey was free enough to accompany her husband to Sandy Hook; the Captain had continually complained to me about his wife; he told me he was tired of her, and said he would have a divorce; he said he was ready to pay Mrs. Chauncey one thousand dollars if she would get a divorce; he said he would give her a home, and she could live with him; he said he was tired of her, and was ready to pay her a thousand dollars if she would get a divorce; he said he would give her a home, and she could live with him; I told the Captain I would see her, and I did see her; she said she would not live with the Captain; she said he was a d—d b—h; she said he was a coward, and was afraid of her; she said she was ready to live with her husband if he would behave himself; she said she would have no more trouble, and that he (the Captain) was the cause of her trouble; she said she was willing to live with the Captain if he would behave himself; she said she was ready to live with the Captain if he would behave himself; she said she was ready to live with the Captain if he would behave himself; she said she was ready
